AT A GLANCE

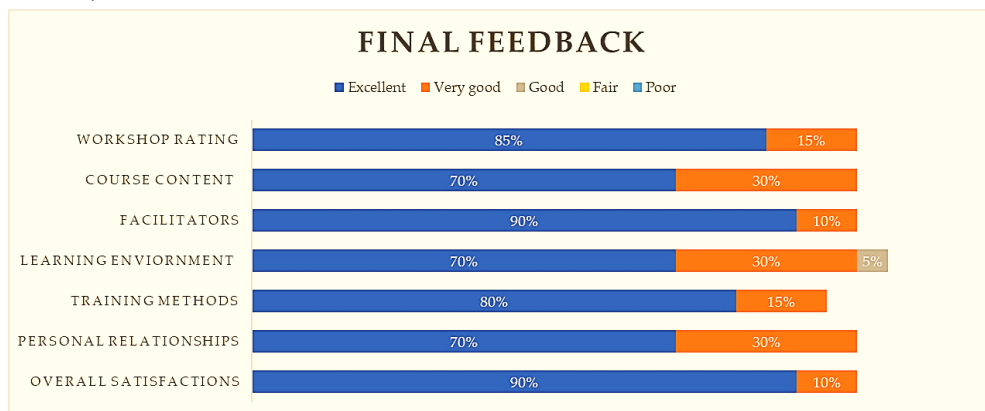

Johns Hopkins Bloomberg School of Public Health and Empower School of Health successfully completed the International Workshop on Strategic Leadership in Global Health and Development, held in Dubai. The goal of the workshop was to assist professionals in building continuously learning organizations, meet the health targets of their countries and provide a guiding shared vision to improve people's health. The course focused on the three roles of transformational leaders:

- Catalytic- Generating a shared vision of a health future people want to create;
- Enabling- Creating a work environment characterized by teamwork, trust, open-mindedness, transparency and shared accountability for all outcomes;
- Learning- Encouraging the development of action-learning organizations with the flexibility to change the vast resources of ordinary people to more effectively and efficiently improve their health.

The unique strength of the workshop was access to the rich experience of faculty from Johns Hopkins, Empower and the participants from 15 countries and 11 organizations. The seminar focused on transforming health institutions, and emphasized leadership that is visionary, enabling and oriented towards learning.

HIGHLIGHTS OF THE WORKSHOP

- Participants' profiles: 20 participants from 11 organizations representing 15 countries attended the workshop
- Trainers: Faculty with over 45 years and 25 years of experience working in international health programs and international and development communication, conducted the sessions and moderated the group work over the course of five days
- Mode of delivery: It was a 5-day face-to-face workshop with theory-driven and program-based sessions along with group exercises, group presentations and case studies
- Key topics covered:
 - Strategic communication and leadership
 - Mental models and strategic leadership
 - Household production of health
 - Making choices in the "marketplace" for maternity care
 - Inspiring a shared vision: the evolution of individual visions to organizational visions
 - Systems thinking: context matters in transforming organizations: how can we look beyond isolated events to see the dynamics, interconnections and deeper patterns of the system?
 - Constraints and root cause analysis: strategy design
 - Strategic communication and leadership in the 21st century: challenges and responses
 - Consequences of the rapid growth of technology and its impact on individuals, organizations and society at large
 - Adaptive leadership: understanding the distinctions between technical versus adaptive problems
 - Strategy design as process of nurturing the learning organization
 - Two-way communication: empathetic listening
 - Team learning and action learning
 - Laws of the Fifth Discipline

PARTICIPANTS' FEEDBACK

"It was a very interesting course facilitated by capable academicians. The duration was appropriate for this kind of training. The practical case studies with well-illustrated infographics were extremely helpful."

Dr Koudaogo Ouedraogo, Representative, UNFPA Benin

"The workshop was excellent. It showcased new concepts which inspire people to think and act positively."

Doan Thi Nga, Country Director, Chemonics International Inc., Vietnam

"The Empower Leadership training is just what I needed. Despite my 20-some years of successive managerial and leadership positions, I was still captivated throughout by the insights and perspectives presented. The Johns Hopkins professors who taught the course are First Class! The Empower Team made each participant feel special and were attentive to the smallest detail pre, during and after the course. I definitely recommend it to anyone in managerial and leadership position."

Argentina Piccin, Representative, UNFPA Cote d'Ivoire

"This workshop gave me the opportunity to learn about the principles needed for health systems strengthening and transformation. The exercises allowed me to bring mental models into real life problems that gave me a deeper understanding of the content. I feel confident to build on what was taught and start implementation when I go back to Ethiopia."

Kidist Tesfaye, Director of Innovative Strategies and Operations and International Communication and Partnerships, St. Paul's Hospital Millennium Medical College, Ethiopia
